Our Place in the Watershed

Presented by

Eric Lambert, Clark County Clean Water Outreach Specialist

Water is one of our planet's most valuable resources, and understanding how humans interact with its natural cycle is a critical first step to preserving it. Knowing one's place in a watershed is an effective way to gain appreciation of local water resources and identify how to act locally to protect these resources. In this presentation participants will learn about the quality of their local watersheds, human impact on the water cycle, and things everyone can do for clean water.
